

Rascal and His Journal Comes Home for a Visit: Read About His Adventures

Dear Parents, 2009

Rascal has come to spend the evening with you. I hope you will include him in your normal family activities. He is making a journal of his travels, so before sending him back to school, please take a few minutes with your child to tell of his adventures. A couple of sentences would be just fine. Of course, an illustration or photograph of his favorite activity would be most appreciated.

Please note that Rascal's bedtime is 8:00 p.m. You will find his nightshirt in the bag. He likes to sleep with his blanket. He doesn't like scary or violent TV. He does like to help put things away. Though his favorite bedtime stories are about bunnies, he likes other stories, as well.

Thank you for welcoming Rascal into your home.

Rascal, His Journal, and His Bag of Books Build Kindergarten Memories

- Families enter into the playfulness of Rascal's Visit.
- Reading about Rascal's adventures builds bonds between home and school.
- Parents often take photos of Rascal with their child.
- Rascal likes to listen to fiction books about Bunnies—of course.
- Rascal becomes a kindergarten friend forever...
